Instructions for authors

To participate in the conference authors can submit abstracts in the following categories: empirical abstract, review abstract, and professional abstract.

The abstract should be written in Times New Roman font, size 12, and should include a short and concisetitle with authors' names and at least three (up to five) keywords.

The abstract can be written in the B/C/S language or English.

Each author can submit a total of three abstracts, with the possibility of being the first author on two of them.

The abstract should not exceed 350 words excluding authors' names, abstract title, and keywords.

The final deadline for abstract submission is March 15, 2024.

For empirical abstracts the standard IMRAD structure should be followed including a clear theoretical framework and research problem, design and research hypotheses, methods, results, and conclusions.

Methods should provide the information about the sample (e.g., N = 100 participants, Mage = 18.7 years, SD = 1.1), important manipulation andvariable measurements (e.g., the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale), without references.

When presenting results, it is important to include information about the comparison of experimental conditions and the statistical analyses employed, as well as the main parameters of statistical significance.This should include mentioning the values of the used statistics (e.g.,In line with expectations, the analysis of variance showed that participants in the stereotype threat condition had lower performance on the working memory task compared with the control group, $F(1, 98) = 12.35$, $p = .039$).

In conclusion, authors should mention the maintheoretical and/or practical implications of the obtained results.

For the submission of review and professional abstracts, authors should clearly mention a theoretical framework and aims of their work or the main questions they attempted to address and explain how those questions were addressed and the findings obtained, as well as further theoretical and/or practical implications of those findings.

In case studies abstract it is necessary to provide information about the main problem, the approach to the case, the methodology of data collection (including applied techniques), as well as the main findings and recommendations for future work.

A preliminary book of abstracts will be available on the conference website: http://sdpsih.ff.unsa.ba/

The final book of abstracts will include the accepted abstracts from authors who have paid the participation fee and presented their work at the VIII Sarajevo Days of Psychology.

We thank you for your participation.
